

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

In the Age of Print it was the custom to condense into the page or two permitted by the publisher an annotated list of those who form the team that made the book happen. This book too has a team. The author owes team members many debts. Every one of them is part of the becoming of this book. Everything is connected.

Here too is something new. An outline of their contributions is online. There each may find a better mention. Another merit of this method is the opportunity to amend my errors, committing which seems all too easy in this enterprise.

A search for Time One finds the site. There may be found not only names, but pictures, recognition of their contributions and some thoughts direct from them.

To each one I say here: Thank you.